Scrap of Life: A Conversation about Women and Resistance in Chile

Nov. 1, 2011– Georgia State University

Arpilleras Exhibit – Film Screening – Talk*

Marjorie Agosin, Chilean Scholar, Author
Gayla Jamison, Documentary Filmmaker

Cinefest Theater – University Center
2:00 - Film Screening of Scaps of Life, produced by Gayla Jamison, based on the book by Marjorie Agosin
2:45 - Presentation

Hurt Building Rotunda:
9 to 6 – Exhibit 4 to 6 - Reception

As symbols of resistance, healing, and remembrance, Chilean arpilleras have communicated the human costs of violence against humanity. Crafted by the women left behind after the military junta disappeared thousands of people in the 1970s, the arpilleras continue to circulate internationally as examples of non-violent resistance.

*For class reservations, instructional materials, directions: rmorris11@gsu.edu, 770-335-3943

Georgia State University Sponsors: Center for Human Rights and Democracy, TAG (Textiles Artisan Group), Textiles - E.G. Welch School of Art and Design, Department of Communication, Communication Graduate Student Association, Center for International Media Education, Women’s Studies Institute. Special thanks to the Harbor Group Management Co. for the Hurt Building venue.